

Community Report

Data Supplement for 2013 - 2014

Dear Friends,

I am reminded daily that transformational change begins with personal connections. A high school student and a police officer talk about shared hopes for their community and work together to clean up a local recreation center. A single mother receives a friendly call reminding her to schedule a mammogram or screening. A group of teens start a social justice club at their high school. These are moments at the core of YW Boston's mission to eliminate racism, empower women, and promote peace, justice, freedom, and dignity for all. By bringing people together across race, gender, and class lines, we inspire changemakers whose actions build a better Boston for all.

YW Boston has been bridging divides in our city for nearly 150 years, and our influence continues to grow. For two years in a row, we served over 10,000 people in our efforts to educate women and girls about health, close the educational achievement gap, improve public safety, and increase civic activism. No organization can build a more equitable city alone, and we are honored to collaborate with more than 450 businesses, schools, and community groups across Boston. As we move forward to confront systemic disparities in health, education, and safety, we extend our sincerest thanks to the institutions and individuals who make it possible for YW Boston to mobilize community action. I invite and encourage you to continue to stand with us in our efforts to strengthen the diversity and vitality of Boston.

With gratitude,

Sylvia Ferrell-Jones
